PASTOR'S CORNER

My dear brothers and sisters in Christ,

Nov. 18 is World Day for the Prevention of and Healing from Child Sexual Exploitation, Abuse, and Violence. I would like to take this opportunity to discuss this painful issue that is too often avoided in discussion.

We recall Christ's words from the Gospel of Matthew, "Let the children come to me, and do not prevent them; for the kingdom of heaven belongs to such as these" (19:14). Each of us has a duty to protect these little ones at all costs. This involves being vigilant to those under our care, knowing where and who they are in the presence of at all times. It also means speaking up when their safety and privacy has been or could be violated.

This is an obligation, not merely a suggestion. The scars of abuse run deep, and their devastating effects are present for the rest of the lives of victims. Those who have suffered child abuse require careful, attentive and patient ministry. Where their dignity and trust has been disregarded, an outpouring of grace is vital.

Brother priests and consecrated men and women of our diocese, you have been placed in a unique situation to make the sacraments and counseling resources available to these children: act immediately to expand these offerings in your home parishes.

All lay brothers and sisters, you participate in family life and play a crucial role in the upbringing of these little ones. Please, keep each other accountable, and watch over your children with intentionality and diligence.

I pray for the safety of children throughout the world, especially those who are currently in a dangerous situation, and for those who have already suffered abuse. Let us work tirelessly to eradicate this real and present scourge in our communities, in our state, country and world. If you know of a situation in which a child is in danger, I urge you to contact law enforcement immediately.

In Christ's love,

Most Rev. Jacques Fabre-Jeune, CS
Bishop of Charleston

ADVANCED GIVING RUNS NOVEMBER 13-27!

St. Joseph Catholic School is excited to participate in this year's #iGiveCatholic Giving Tuesday on November 28, 2023. #iGiveCatholic is a national effort to support the local elements of the Catholic Church on the Tuesday after Thanksgiving, otherwise known as Giving Tuesday.

On November 28th, all friends of St. Joseph Catholic School are invited to visit our school's donation page to make an online gift that will help us fund Phase II of our Building Safety Plan and our Tuition Assistance Fund.

If you would prefer not to give online, donations by cash, check, or credit card are accepted. Please contact St. Joseph Catholic School at 864-760-1619 for details.
